

Biblical Ethics (Human Nature, Morality, and Ethics) adapted from David W. Jones

1. The distinctives of biblical ethics include:
 - a. Being built on an _____, _____ worldview.
 - b. Being the natural _____ of merit imputed by God rather than a means of _____ merit with God.
 - c. Seeking to recognize and to participate in God's moral order already present within the _____ and in _____.
 - d. Affirming that immorality stems from _____, not primarily from man's _____ of ethics or from _____.
 - e. Incorporating three elements of a moral event: _____, _____, and _____.

2. Biblical ethics is the study and _____ of the _____ prescribed in God's Word that pertain to the kind of conduct, character, and goals required of one who professes to be in a redemptive relationship with the Lord Jesus Christ.

3. Two main types of ethical systems exist:
 - a. _____ ethics, which assigns moral praise or blame based upon the _____ of a moral event.
 - b. Deontological ethics, which makes ethical judgments based on the morality of _____ when evaluated for conformity of the actions to prescribed morals.

4. Scripture is the source of moral _____ for biblical ethics.
 - a. The source of moral authority will determine the "summum bonum," or _____.
 - b. Moral pitfalls related to the source of moral authority include personal _____, past _____, and perceived _____.

5. Conduct, character, and goals are the three parts of _____.

David W. Jones, Introduction to Biblical Ethics. 2013.

John Murray, Principles of Conduct: Aspects of Biblical Ethics. 1957.