

We ventured to Overlook #2 & #3 for spectacular views. During the largest floods, we would be 10-15 feet underwater where we were standing and we were probably 20-25 ft above the water.

Lorene was greeted by this dog when we first arrived. They seemed like old friends. The dog immediately rolled over for a belly rub.

We enjoyed an expansive upstream view of the falls at the overlook.

The downstream view

We saw this brave kayaker paddle over the falls several times.

While upside down, he maintains his grip on his paddle.

It takes a lot of work and experience to kayak here. He hiked back up the rocks with the kayak on his back after each trip. Before returning, he would always visit his videographer friend to check on his technique.

Here he goes again

He uses the same inverted technique again ... probably not intentionally. But, he survived and was undeterred from going over again.

A Great Blue Heron flew down the river below us.
